It is our privilege this morning to publish interviews with some of the delegates to the Pan-American Congress..

These gentlemen have been taking a bird's-eye view of the various industries of New England. They seem to be greatly impressed by our monster woollen and cotton mills, by the ingenuity, skill and enterprise of American manufacturers and by the general air of contentment and prosperity which charsoterizes the people.

We in turn hold the governments which they represent in high regard. and take no little pride in the fact that Die major part of this Western Hemisa few generations their citizens will beone homogeneous, the right relations be ween contiguous republies will be established, they will occupy a commanding position among the Powers of the globe and lay the foundations of a fort to keep alive the fires of sectional New York Only such a fair could be political future which will largely in- discord, or they are fanatics of the stripe | held in Chicago Daily News fluence the progress of mankind.

We are gratified also by their oft re peated desire to increase their trade with the United States, and earnestly Hope that the obstacles in the way of that consummation, and which shut us out from the markets of the world, may be removed:

It seems a little anomalous, however, that an administration pledged to a practically prohibitive tariff should talk so much about closer commercial relations with other nations. Its pronounced policy is to shut the door against the very trade which this Congress is called

"Let our government give us free gates in Lowell, "and we can show you something greater and better than this, and it will be for your benefit as well as solved. When we revise and reform our tariff laws, then a convention of this kind will reach a definite conclusion. and we can successfully compete with foreigners in the South American market. Until then conventions can accomplish nothing.

Blaine seems to foster and which he gress-that is, the establishment of a protectorate over these republies-there can be but one opinion among right minded American citizens. It is time to say with perfect candor and a good deal of firmness that the United States has no business to enter into entangling alliances either with American repub lies or with the effete mo, archies of Europe. They are not in accordance with por with the inclinations of the people.

Mr. Blaine's interpretation of the Monroe doctrine is at once felse and dangerous The delegates know what that dectrine is as well as we do. It is simple enough. The policy which Blaine represents, however, would involve us in the very difficulties which the Monroe doetrine was intended to nois.

While we cherish the heartiest good will toward the young and ambitious governments which are fighting their way to permanence and national security, it would be folly for us ito make their quarrels ours or to assume any responsibility for their relations to each other. The time is not ripe for so radioal and perilous a movement.

We strongly suspect, therefore, that this Congress is simply a piece of political clap trap, a pyrotechnic exhibition on the part of the magnetic statesmen, a brilliant bit of ante-election strategy having reference to the next Presiden-

But the people are not to be caught with such chaff. They are averse to shouldering responsibilities for the disputes-which are sure to arise in Central and South America and to being drawn into relations which might very seriously embarrass us. When occasion demands we are always ready to defend what we believe to be our own rights, but to be dragged into the misunderstandings of our neighbors-such an attempt on the part of Mr. Blaine should be resented with hot indignation.
